'The field work is complete. It's time to analyze the results and report to your clients… so why are you spending so much time formatting, displaying and distributing your findings?'

A Picture is Worth a Thousand Words

Breken Reporting Services for Researchers fully automates raw data integration into reporting systems using Word, PowerPoint, PDF or web based HTML – giving your clients a visual display of the results. And it's secure, allowing access only to those who need it.

We work with you to tailor the look of your reports and presentations and to meet your clients' specifications. You or your clients can insert comments, set up discussion forums, a Q&A or a monitored/unmonitored best practices area, all hosted on our secure servers.

Are you creating trend reports that show data changes over time? With our system you can use your standard dataset to automatically update your presentation material for current and historical data.

Making it Easy

Breken has been building secure web-based reporting systems for more than 10 years. We create systems that allow your clients to access their reports via the web with a unique encrypted login and password. As an administrator, you can control who has access to information and how it is presented. Reports can be generated 'on-the-fly' so they are up to the second, or they can be generated on an ad-hoc basis. We can provide your clients with graphical reports and charts to your specifications and with the tools to download raw data if they choose.

Web based data and reports are stored on our secure servers and delivered using state-of-the-art fibre optic systems with high availability and fast delivery.

Our systems are used by research companies to help deliver secure customized reports to financial institutions, automotive companies, government and numerous other types of organizations.
